HEPATITIS B MADE EASY

A partnership program of St Vincent's Hospital Melbourne and the Centre for Ethnicity, Culture and Health

WHY IS HEPATITIS B IMPORTANT?

- More than 225,000 people in Australia are living with hepatitis B.
- Only about 60% of these people are aware that they have hepatitis B. The majority of people living with hepatitis B in Australia come from culturally and linguistically diverse communities.
- People living with hepatitis B often do not experience symptoms until serious liver disease develops. If left untreated hepatitis B can lead to cirrhosis, liver failure and liver cancer.
- We can manage hepatitis B very well and good medical management prevents most complications. We need to encourage people to get tested and engage in health care.

HEPATITIS B MADE EASY AIMS TO:

- Increase understanding of basic facts about hepatitis B testing, transmission & treatment.
- Explore strategies that meet the needs of affected communities.
- Increase knowledge on how to deliver appropriate health literate and culturally competent care to people affected by hepatitis B.
- Learn about resources, supports and websites that assist health workers and the affected communities to seek help.
